

Office Depot named to the Companies That Care Honor Roll

We are pleased to announce that Office Depot has again been named to the Companies That Care Honor Roll for 2007 by the Center for Companies That Care. This is the fourth consecutive year in which we have received this honor and one of the few companies on the list to do so.

Honor Roll recipients are selected for their deep commitment to elevating the quality of the work environment for their associates and the quality of life for people in the broader community – as well as their adherence to the 10 characteristics of a “Company That Cares”:

1. Sustain a work environment founded on dignity and respect for all associates.
2. Make associates feel their jobs are important.
3. Cultivate the full potential of all associates.
4. Encourage individual pursuit of work/life balance.
5. Enable the well-being of individuals and their families through compensation, benefits, policies and practices.
6. Develop great bosses who excel at managing people as well as results.
7. Appreciate and recognize the contributions of people who work there.
8. Establish and communicate standards for ethical behavior and integrity.
9. Get involved in community endeavors and/or public policy.
10. Consider the human toll when making business decisions.

Founded in 2002, Companies That Care is a national, not-for-profit organization that seeks to encourage, celebrate and sustain businesses and organizations that prize associates and are committed to ongoing community service.
