

'Tis the Season: Xerox Gives Back to Philadelphia Community

Xerox's Greatest Philadelphia Sales Organization (GPSO) is committed to bringing value back to the community by participating in local events. What is unique about GPSO's community involvement is that it is driven by the sales team rather than directed by management. The employees volunteer in events throughout the year in all locations GPSO works in, including eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware.

"The phrase 'pay it forward' resonates with my team," said Vincent Scire, vice president of Greatest Philadelphia, Xerox. "Our customers support us, and in turn, we support the community. Social responsibility and corporate citizenship are ingrained in our culture."

The Food Bank of Southern N.J. provides 95,000 pounds of groceries to the community every week and GPSO is stepping up to help in December. Food boxes are located in each of Xerox's offices in the region to collect donations including canned vegetables, peanut butter, jelly, macaroni and cheese and breakfast cereal. Employees will be working to sort and distribute food to the recipients on Dec. 8.

GPSO is also working with Citizens Acting Together Can Help (CATCH) this month. The organization hosts holiday dinners throughout the Camden, N.J. and Philadelphia, PA areas. Xerox volunteers will be serving these meals to the residents and guests of CATCH and providing a monetary contribution to help offset food and supplies for the dinners.
