

A New Class of Solutions Provider: Xerox Completes Acquisition of Affiliated Computer Services

Xerox completed its acquisition of Affiliated Computer Services (ACS) last month, transforming the company into the world's leader in business process and document management. Xerox and ACS customers in the greater Philadelphia region will now have access to Xerox's strengths in document technology and services, and ACS' expertise in managing and automating work processes.

Xerox and ACS' front line customer representatives are equipped with the details and tools to support customers interested in what the new relationship can offer. Customers on both sides can expect new resources introduced – differentiated solutions that will provide faster, more automated ways to manage business processes. Both companies are committed to maintaining the high level of service the customers expect and the lines of communication are open.

“The acquisition was customer driven and my team is committed to bringing the value of the deal to the local region,” said Vincent Scire, vice president of Greater Philadelphia, Xerox. “The potential for early collaboration is significant and we've already working with customers who want to explore the options created by the Xerox and ACS partnership.”

The acquisition means that Xerox has the technology and services to help customers reach new levels of efficiency and effectiveness, giving them the freedom to focus on what matters most: their real business.
